E Circle the correct answers.

Dear Margarita,

I'm so excited – I started a new job last week! I am now a sales clerk in a big department store in the city. All of / Many the other stores in this city are small so I'm pretty lucky. The other salespeople in the store are ¹*all / some* very friendly but ²*none / many* of them like working there. I don't know why! The boss is professional and almost ³*most / all* of the customers are ok with the service, but ⁴*most / some* of them, about 10%, hate waiting in line at the checkouts. They get angry sometimes!

I like it, but it's a hard job. We work long hours because the store is open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day. One nice thing is that we get a special price, but ⁵*many / none* of the clothes are the right size for me, so I can't buy anything! Maybe that's good because then I can save ⁶*some / many* of my salary to buy a new flat-screen TV. Mine broke last week!

Write soon and tell me ⁷*all / none* of your news.

Love,

Milly

Doing the cleaning could make you a millionaire!

A British man who recently invented a smart new hairdryer, recalls the time when he was a child. He did the dishes, made the beds and did the cooking at home for his mom. One job he found pretty awful was cleaning the floor. When he got married, he and his wife did the housework every Saturday, all day. Were they happy? Not at all. So, this inventor saved a little money and borrowed a lot from his bank and used it to build hundreds of different cleaners. He tried to sell some of them, but he didn't sell any. He was sure that his idea for a fast cleaner was great, so he borrowed more money from the bank. He also sold the family home, but this made his family very worried and extremely angry. Finally, after a long time, customers bought many of his fast cleaners in the United Kingdom and in three years he paid back all the money to the bank! He was a success! Nowadays, his cleaners are in shops all around the world. Does he do the housework at home now? Of course! He says he's going to invent a new cleaner next year. It's his favorite hobby after a long day at the office and, now that he is rich, he sometimes lends young inventors money to help develop their ideas!
