

EVOLVE LEVEL 3, audioscript for Unit Quiz 10B

Ben: Hi, John. What are you doing?

John: I'm writing a product review online.

Emma: Cool. What did you buy?

John: I bought these earphones. You know how I love to listen to music.

Ben: What are you going to say, John?

John: Well, the sound is really good, but the earphones don't stay in my ears. They keep falling out. This is a big problem. I'm writing about the product because I don't want other people to have the same problem. I think it's important to give feedback about products.

Ben: Really, John? I never give feedback because it's a waste of time. My earphones stay in my ears, but the sound is terrible! If I write a bad review, will the company send me a new pair of earphones?

John: I don't think so, Ben.

Emma: I really like my earphones. The sound is perfect, and they're pink – my favorite color!

Ben: Lucky you, Emma!

Emma: I wrote a positive review. It's good to give positive feedback about products. It helps other people make decisions. I also like to exchange opinions with people who have similar taste. I read The Hunger Games, and there were over 70,000 book reviews about it.

John: Wow! That's a lot!

Emma: I really enjoy reading people's opinions. Some people suggest other products for me to try.

Ben: I don't buy things because of reviews. I only trust my friends and people I know. If I want a book, I go to the local bookstore and ask the people there. They always give me good ideas.

John: You still go to bookstores, Ben? I buy all my books online. I agree with Emma – the reviews are really useful. Anyway, I'm going to give these earphones three stars out of five.

Emma: Are you sure the problem isn't that your ears are too big, John?

John: Emma!
